The 2008 fall program for the World Affairs Council of Jacksonville has been finalized and we're pleased to give you an early preview of speakers who have agreed to come. Please mark your calendars now and spread the word! Martin Indyk, Ambassador to Israel and Assistant Secretary of State for Near East Affairs during the Clinton Administration, and currently Director of the Saban Center for Middle East Policy, will discuss the Arab-Israeli conflict in September. In October, John Zogby, President/CEO of Zogby International will discuss public opinion at home and abroad at the River Club, as well as the way we'll be: a revelation of a new and developing American character, one that will influence everything from the politicians we vote for to the goods and services we buy to the way we conduct our daily lives, over at UNF. Finally, David Brooks has agreed to make a post-election appearance, to discuss the political outlook. Please see the attached fall calendar of events for details.

As one of the most prestigious citizen forums in Northeast Florida, the World Affairs Council of Jacksonville is a non-profit, non-partisan, educational organization devoted to engaging the community in discussions about global issues of today and tomorrow. Our mission is to promote understanding of the world and its people and to enable citizens to become informed participants in the global community. Membership is open to civic-minded and internationally-minded members of the First Coast Community.
